NEWSLETTER

"Every three years, the European Commission publishes its report on economic, social and territorial cohesion, detailing progress in these areas and how the EU, national and regional governments have contributed.

On 9 November 2010, the 5th Cohesion Report has been published. Its conclusions draw the picture of a post-2013 cohesion policy which allows all European cities and regions to actively pursue smart, sustainable and inclusive growth.

Most importantly, it calls for an ambitious urban agenda of cohesion policy. This not only implies clearly identifying urban actions and related financial resources in regional programmes, but also giving a stronger role to cities.

The coming months will be crucial for translating this call for reinforced urban dimension into (regulatory) practice for post-2013 cohesion policy.

We therefore invite you to give us your ideas and to contribute to the public consultation of the conclusions of the 5th Cohesion Report which is open until 31 January 2011: http://ec.europa.eu/regional_policy/consultation/5cr/index_en.cfm."

CONFERENCES

"Peri-urban regions contribute to the sustainable growth of Europe's cities"

"The sustainable growth of Europe's cities cannot be realised fully without the contribution of their neighbouring peri-urban areas," said MEP Lambert van Nistelrooij (the Netherlands, EPP), Vice-President of the URBAN Intergroup, opening a hearing, organised on 9 November 2010, as part of the Randstad Region Week in Brussels.

"Long term sustainability in all its aspects – economic, social and environmental – is a shared challenge for Europe's cities together with their peri-urban neighbouring areas," insisted Michel Grégoire, new President of PURPLE, the voice of the Peri-Urban Regions in Europe, opening the debate.

A few weeks after the EU "Budget Review" and at the eve of the presentation by the European Commission of the 5th Cohesion Report launching the debate on the EU regional policy after 2013, Asje Van Dijk (Randstad region, Member of the Executive Board, Province of Zuid-Holland) and

Asje van Dijk (on the left) and MEP Lambert van Nistelrooij (the Netherlands, EPP) (on the right) participated to the conference on "peri-urban contribution to the sustainable growth of Europe's cities."

Philip Atkins (West Midlands, Leader of Staffordshire County Council) presented several convincing case studies on behalf of the PURPLE regions.

Both of them clearly showed that Peri-urban regions do provide vital resources which support Europe's urban populations and enhance the quality of life of city dwellers.

"Policy makers need to avoid sectorisation and find ways to create links and relations between cities and their surrounding areas - whatever we call them," reacted MEP Jan Olbrycht (Poland, EPP), President of the URBAN Intergroup.

MEP Lambert Van Nistelrooij (the Netherlands, EPP) advised the PURPLE network "to come up with ideas for new solutions for a framework of funding and support better capacities to respond to complex regional situations such as those outlined" during the debate.

"Cities of the Future need European funds"

In the beautiful premises of the Senate Chamber of the Czech Parliament in Prague, a conference labelled "Cities of the Future" was held on 26 November 2010.

This conference was organized on MEP Oldřich Vlasák initiative (Czech Republic, ECR), President of the Union of Towns and Municipalities in Czech Republic, and Luděk Sefzig, Chairman of the Senate Committee for European Union Affairs, under the patronage of the URBAN Intergroup which was represented by its President MEP Jan Olbrycht (Poland, EPP).

This high-level conference was attended by representatives of the European Parliament, European Commission, Czech government, regional and local authorities as well as academia and professionals from the urban field.

The conference highlighted some major obstacles that cities face, but also challenges for the successful development of larger urban areas. These needs include new solutions to urban unemployment, construction of basic infrastructure with connections to surrounding communities and transnational networks, application of strategic approach to problems beyond administrative city limits and adaptation to new impulses, including the use of information and communication technologies.

The aim was not only to identify which needs and problems cities face today, but also to see how these problems can be better adressed with European and national financial instruments.

The debate also concerned the European funds and their setting, because they are one of the major sources of stimulating urban development.

"Sustainable planning can reduce social and territorial inequalities"

On 1st December 2010, the Ile-de-France region and the URBAN intergroup, organised a conference on "Sustainable mobility and planning: the European Metropolis challenges" in the Committee of the Regions in Brussels.

For Anne Hidalgo, President of Ile-de-France-Europe office, this conference, based on the case of the Ile-de-France region and the experiences of other metropolitan areas, "[gave] the opportunity to share knowledge and good practices on sustainable planning which can reduce social and territorial inequalities in order to ensure a better quality of life."

Vice-presidents of the region Jean-Vincent Placé (in charge of transport and mobility) and Alain Amédro (in charge of spatial planning), and MEP Karima Delli (France, Greens/EFA) who took part in the debate, discussed also how European metropolitan areas could better anticipate the reform of cohesion policies as urban agenda is becoming one of its main priorities (as it was highlighted in the 5th Report on economic, social and territorial cohesion, recently published by the European Commission). "It is essential that the post-2013 financial perspectives – expected to be drafted during the first semester of 2011 – take into account these proposals," speakers insisted.

MEP Karima Delli (France, Greens/EFA) (in the middle) took part in the debate on "Metropolis challenges" in the Committee of the Regions.

"ERDF can significantly contribute to improve energy efficiency in housing"

The URBAN Intergroup, at the initiative of MEP Karima Delli (France, Greens/EFA), organized on 9 December 2010 a conference entitled "Mid term review of the use of European Development Fund (ERDF) to support energy efficiency in existing housing." This conference showed that social housing actors are mobilized to present good and sustainable projects supported by ERDF and to use available funds.

The ERDF measure to improve energy efficiency was adopted in May 2009, as part of a revision procedure of the Article 7 of the ERDF Regulation, and supported by the Intergroup. As said during the conference, it is already used in several Member States, including the United Kingdom (over 70% of the envelope has already been committed), Estonia, Belgium, Poland or France where 70% of the amounts available have already been programmed.

Thierry Repentin, Chairman of the "Union sociale pour l'habitat" and French Senator, underlined that ERDF support is essential for social housing. He called for the end of the 4% limitation.

On this point, MEP Karima Delli proposed to better evaluate regional and local needs in terms of energy performances of housing in each Member State.

She also proposed the REGI committee to organise in 2011 a hearing with all actors involved in the implementation of the European tools for energy performance of housing (ERDF, JESSICA, ELENA, etc.)

Christos Doukeridis, Housing Secretary of State of Brussels Capital Region, on behalf of the Belgian Presidency of the EU, concluded the conference by recalling that European Housing Ministers must continue to advocate for ERDF support to sustainable urban development, in which housing would be fully taken into account, as they did in the Toledo Meeting in June.

WHAT WE ACHIEVED?

Annual activity report

URBAN Intergroup was actively involved, during the whole 2010, in putting urban needs on the agenda of EU policies.

We sent a letter to Commissioner Oettinger concerning the use of unspent funds from the Recovery Plan for energy efficiency investments in cities.

Moreover, our Intergroup presented its position about the role of cities in the implementation of the EU 2020 Strategy referring to the Toledo Declaration in the letter sent to responsible Ministers for Housing in Member States.

Finally, we successfully proposed a preparatory action RURBAN-Partnership for sustainable urban-rural development which will be implemented by DG REGIO in the years 2011-2012.

We are very pleased to inform you that 150 partners from local, regional, national and European level that represent the interests of Europe's towns and cities follow our daily work and 61 of them decided to become our official partners.

To stay in contact with them and to keep them informed about urban issues, URBAN Intergroup as well as its members organized several conferences in 2010.

Moreover, the Intergroup was invited to participate in several events and conferences to exchange views on urban related issues.
